

A distributional study of negated adjectives and antonyms

Supplementary materials

1 Annotation of lexical antonyms: contraries vs. contradictory

Data Each annotator is given a list of 148 adjectives pairs with opposite meanings (antonyms). The list is obtained according to the following criteria:

- The adjectives are tagged as regular antonyms in the Lexical Negation dictionary (van Son, van Miltenburg);
- Both the adjectives occur more than 100 times in the training corpus of the distributional model (UkWac + Wacky);
- The negated adjective of at least one of the members of the pair occurs more than 100 times in the training corpus of the distributional model (UkWac + Wacky).

Annotation guidelines Given a pair of words  $a_1$  and  $a_2$ , the annotator considers the following sentence pattern:

(a)  $X$  is neither  $a_1$  nor  $a_2$

- The annotator tags the pair as x if she does not know the meaning of the word, or does not interpret the two words as having opposite meanings.
- The annotator tags the pair as 1 (contrary) if (a) is acceptable under a default context.
- The annotator tags the pair as 0 (contradictory) if (a) is not acceptable under a default context.

The annotator is asked to carry out the task following for each case her first intuitive judgement.

Agreement Interraters agreement is computed using Fleiss'  $k$ , which generalizes Cohen's  $k$  to cases with more than two coders.

- Agreement on the three categories (1, 0, x): Fleiss'  $k = 0.38$ ;
- Agreement on two categories (1, 0): : Fleiss'  $k = 0.37$ .

Dataset For the purpose of the final categorization used in the analyses, only pairs that have been categorized as either 1 or 0 are considered, hence discarding those for which at least one annotator tagged them as x, or for which there was not full agreement.
